

This is often considered to be the beginning of the busiest time of the year. Fortunately, the air is cooler and filled with some wonderful smells from hot beverages as we make plans to be with loved ones for the upcoming holidays. Please remember the meaning of these holidays and plan an activity or a moment for all to reflect on what they are thankful for. It may be the simple beauty of the Fall season or being able to be here to celebrate with each other.

I am very thankful for how so many of you share your life with me and keep me updated on your struggles with health issues. Your tenacity to get better is a true blessing and inspiration to me.

I wish you all a safe and happy Thanksgiving and look forward to you sharing your holiday stories with me.
